

Brandon Dulaney

I have spent my career working directly with people through non-profit organizations and seeing firsthand the impact that investing in others can create for individuals, families, and communities. I came to United Way because of the excellent opportunity it provides to pair my skills, experiences, and passions with a mission that I know is creating lasting change. Through financial empowerment, United Way is instilling confidence in our neighbors to experience the financial freedom they deserve to pursue their dreams. By attaining my certification through the National Association of Certified Credit Counselors and the Cities for Financial Empowerment Fund, I join the efforts already underway at the Financial Empowerment Center where I look forward to meeting clients and being a part of their story as they take control of their finances and achieve their goals.
